Dutch Solutions at the Lomberger Days

Entrepreneurship and innovation are essential ingredients for the success of the Netherlands as a global agricultural power, Deputy Ambassador Erik van Uum told the audience at the annual Lomberger Days (7-8 December) in Maribor. That is why 80% of all horticultural innovations worldwide originates from the Netherlands. Against this backdrop, David van de Graaf from Delphy and Klaas Plas from Berry Konsult presented sophisticated production and protection methods for strawberries and apples. The conference was organised in cooperation with the Netherlands Embassy. More

Fresh Dutch Ideas for Fresh Slovene Products

Slovenia wants to follow the Netherlands in advanced horticulture. Hence, the Technology Investment Forum in Horticulture partnered with the Netherlands Embassy. Ambassador Bart Twaalfhoven kick-started the 27 November event by underlining how Dutch producers cooperate to increase the production of safe and tasty food. Then Klaas Plas from Berry Konsult presented how to grow strawberries using less pesticides. More

Dutch Economic Diplomacy in the Region

Economic advisors of Dutch embassies in Central and Southeast Europe gathered in Ljubljana on 23 and 24 November. They shared best practices in economic diplomacy and identified joint activities in innovation, mobility, circular economy and agriculture. The program included a visit to the Heineken-owned Laško Union Brewery in Ljubljana, which fulfils a strategic function in the region. More

Dutch Business Successes in Slovenia

To know the players on the market is an important rule in business. Therefore, Deputy Ambassador Erik van Uum went to see Dutch companies active in Slovenia: Shell, Philips, Unilever and Intersocks. Their impact on the local market goes beyond being successful, as all represent the values of corporate social responsibility too. More
